The passage begins with a verse from the Quran, expressing praise and gratitude to God, followed by a prayer for guidance on the straight path. The verse highlights that Allah is the Master of the Day of Judgment, who deserves worship and seeking help. The text then shares information about the translation of the Quran into English, titled "The Easy Qur'an", which is part of the King Fahd National Library publication. The translation includes footnotes with authentic hadiths for reference. The passage also quotes a few inspiring hadiths that convey important messages: * Those who strive in Allah's Cause will be guided to His Ways. * Some people are keys to goodness and shutters to evil, while others have the opposite effect. * Allah rewards those who use their knowledge for good and punishes those who misuse it. Additionally, the text mentions a quote from Tawakkul Karman, a Nobel laureate, about hijab, where she explains that wearing clothes is not regressive but rather an advancement in human thought and civilization. Lastly, the passage includes a call to action, encouraging readers to download a PDF of the Easy Qur'an translation for personal study and educational research. Smiling at your brother is charity, say a Hadith. Read more and find treasure! If you want to talk to Allah, pray. If you want Allah to talk to you, read Qur'an. Abu Hurayrah once visited the market in Madinah. He noticed people were too busy with their own affairs and said, "O people of the market, how incapable you are!" They asked him to explain. Abu Hurayrah replied that he saw his friend's inheritance at the mosque, so why weren't they there? The group went to the mosque but found no distribution. When asked if they had seen anyone praying or reciting Qur'an, they said yes, but didn't see anything being distributed. Abu Hurayrah then said, "Woe to you! That is Muhammad's inheritance!" An English professor wrote a phrase on the board and asked his students to punctuate it correctly. The boys punctuated it as "A woman without her man is nothing!", while the girls punctuated it as "A woman: without her, man is nothing!". On a journey, the Prophet ordered his companions to prepare a sheep for food. A man said he would perform dhabh, another would skin it, and another would cook it. The Prophet then gathered firewood, saying, "I do not like to be set apart from you; Allah does not like to see His servant aloof from his companions." If you say SUBHANALLAH WA BI HAMDHI HI 100 times: * Your minor sins will be forgiven. * 100 date-palm trees will be planted for you in Jannah. During his old age, Imam Ahmed was travelling when he stopped at a town. He didn't know anyone and couldn't find shelter, so he went to the mosque yard. However, the caretaker refused him entry due to humility. A baker took pity on him and offered hospitality. During their stay, the baker would constantly recite Istighfar. Imam Ahmed asked the baker about his practice of saying Istighfar. The baker replied that Allah had accepted all his du'as except one, which was not being granted permission to meet Imam Ahmed himself. Imam Ahmed bin Hanbal once stated that Allah not only heard his dua but also guided him to the doorstep of a baker, illustrating the power of faith and prayer. The Prophet Muhammad, peace be upon him, was known for his kindness and humility, as seen in a story where he carried Husain ibn Ali on his shoulders and responded to a man's comment by saying, "And what an excellent rider he is!" This anecdote highlights the importance of treating others with respect and dignity. In a heartfelt prayer, a servant of Allah asks to be guided by the Quran, seeking comfort and solace in its words. The prayer expresses a deep desire to be close to Allah and to be freed from sorrow and anxiety. As the end of life approaches, a person reflects on their mortality, realizing that every soul has a predetermined date to leave its body and meet its eternal fate. The poem urges others to pray and decide their path, warning that tomorrow could be their day of reckoning. It emphasizes the importance of living a virtuous life, as those who do not will face consequences in the afterlife. The poem concludes with a call to brothers to pray and seek guidance from Allah, asking for forgiveness and mercy. In another prayer, a person asks Allah to grant them the ability to reflect on and understand the Quran, seeking knowledge and wisdom. The article also includes various Islamic quotes and verses, including "Envy eats away good deeds as fire devours firewood" and "Do not despair of Allah's Mercy." It reminds believers to fear Allah and consider their actions, as they will be accountable for them in the Day of Judgement. The importance of education and seeking knowledge is also emphasized, with links to various resources on Islam, Quran, and Hadith. Ultimately, the article encourages readers to seek guidance from Allah, cultivate good deeds, and prepare for the afterlife by living a righteous life. 1. Self Assessment 2.
