What's it take to be a superhero? For the most part, it's luck: born at the right place at the wrong time, such as Superman on the eve of Krypton's destruction; or exposed to ionizing radiation to somehow develop superhuman abilities instead of cancer, such as Spiderman and Hulk. Then there are those overly ambitious multi-millionaires — Bruce Wayne, Oliver Queen, and Tony Stark — who kick bad-guy butt as Batman, Green Arrow, and Iron Man, respectively. [Latest News on Iron Man] These non-mutated super-rich superheroes have no superhuman powers. They instead rely on their wits, skill and strength. This begs the question: Given a few million dollars in discretionary spending, could you be such a superhero? [7 Amazing Superhuman Feats] The answer is yes, well, at least almost, according to E. Paul Zehr, a professor of kinesiology and neuroscience at the University of Victoria, in British Columbia. Zehr takes on Iron Man in particular in his latest book, "Inventing Iron Man: The Possibility of a Human Machine" (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2011). This book, replete with images of Iron Man action figures and real tales of his Iron Man training, is a sequel to Zehr's 2006 book "Becoming Batman." Zehr's university-based research includes neuroplasticity, akin to neural rewiring, associated with exercise training and rehabilitation. This expertise, combined with Zehr's childlike curiosity and proficiency in martial arts, makes "Inventing Iron Man" — along with "Becoming Batman" before it — a fascinating exploration of human potential. I am Iron Man! In short, without spoiling Zehr's latest book, it would take years to build the Iron Man suit, years to become accustomed to the suit, and years to train to fight and fly. Thus, you'd be middle age before you could begin your Iron Man career; and by that time, you'd be past your prime. Yet what Zehr demonstrates so adroitly in this book is that Iron Man concepts are being invented every day. For example, Iron Man's iron suit has evolved considerably since its debut in a 1963 Marvel comic book, from knight-like armor to something sleek and flexible. So, too, have real-life protective suits, from bulletproof vests to astronaut gear. The modern incarnation of Iron Man now has better control of his suit, as if it were skin. So, too, do amputees with their prosthetics; and now we are entering into an era of brain-machine interface, with mere thoughts controlling a computer cursor. And as Iron Man can fly, so too can "Jet Man" Yves Rossy, the first person to achieve sustained flight with jet-powered wings on his back. The 52-year-old Rossy in fact is much like any superhero in training, racing against old age to perfect his "super" ability. [Superhero or Supervillain: Which Lurks Inside You?] Crippled inside But here comes the dose of reality. While Iron Man's suit is nearly indestructible, the man inside it is not. Tony Stark ultimately would be doomed by concussions and other injuries, Zehr explains. The long-term effects of head injuries have garnered much public attention recently with the revelation of former National Football League players suffering from depression and cognitive disorders from years of head banging. Less discussed but perhaps more dangerous are blast waves from explosions that many soldiers experience; these are shocks that rip through the body at the speed of sound. Iron Man is exposed to impacts and blast waves, and these get amplified through the iron, making matters worse. After a decade of such injury, it is unlikely that Stark could maintain his wits to operate the suit, let alone fight crime. Next, brain-machine interface is only now an emerging field. Monkeys and humans must train for weeks or months to do something as simple as move a computer cursor with their thoughts. This will always be difficult, Zehr told LiveScience, because "you're trying to get your mind to do something it was never wired to do." Iron Man's suit needs to be connected to Tony Stark's body as if it is an extension of him; he's not merely a knight in armor. This total control would take years of dedicated training to master; and the artificial circuitry to allow it would most certainly break down or malfunction, particularly in the presence of the aforementioned blast waves. Then there's the consequence of risky training. If old age doesn't catch up with "Jet Man" Rossy, a crippling or fatal accident might. The same is true for anyone hoping to master superhero feats such as flying. [7 Ways the Mind and Body Change With Age] Yet ultimately "Inventing Iron Man" is a book of hope. One only needs to visit the Walter Reed National Military Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., to see real-life Iron Men and women, injured in battle, re-inventing themselves and regaining strength and mobility. Many of the struggles that Iron Man Tony Stark would face, so carefully detailed in Zehr's book, these soldiers encounter every day. This makes "Inventing Iron Man" a manual as much as it is a science-grounded examination of science fiction. Christopher Wanjek is the author of the books "Bad Medicine" and "Food At Work." His column, Bad Medicine, appears regularly on LiveScience. Editor's Note: This article has been updated to correct Oliver Queen's name, which included the wrong last name. ₹ 4800/- Inclusive of all taxes I found this template from the internet and the idea was to cut a round butter cake into the shape of Iron Man (the white part), then use a large layer of red fondant to cover the cake and lastly place the yellow pieces in the middle for the face. I planned to have the cake consumed on the 3rd day after being made; but to play safe, I needed to have a cake that had a shelf life of more than one week under room temperature. To my surprise, people said pound cakes with cream cheese has a rather long shelf life (I'm still doubtful); from what I read online, cakes with higher sugar content and those that are wrapped with fondant can also be stored for longer. So I began with this big project ... Iron man fondant cake ... Makes a 20cm round cake which will be cut into the shape of Iron Man's face Ingredients the fondant ... 2 cups of marshmallows ... 1 tsp of water ... 3 cups of icing sugar plus a bit more for kneading ... some shortening or oil to grease the bowl ... red and yellow food colouring ... golden food paint 1. Grease the bowl with oil or shortening 2. Put marshmallows into the bowl, pour water over the marshmallows then heat it up for 30 seconds 3. Use a spatula to stir the marshmallows, if they haven't melted completely, microwave for another 30 seconds and stir again until melted 4. Add in one cup of icing sugar and stir gently until well incorporated; add in one cup of sugar at a time 5. Grab a bit of icing sugar with your hands then start kneading the fondant, add in extra icing sugar if the dough is too sticky; knead until the dough sticks together like a play dough 6. Save a small bit of white fondant, then divide the rest of the dough into two; one should be bigger than the other (ratio is around 7:3) 7. Add a few drops of red colouring to the larger dough and knead until colour is well mixed; keep adding more drops and knead until a vibrant colour is formed 8. Do the same to the smaller dough with yellow colouring this time 9. Place the two dough in two zipper bags and place them in the fridge lemon pound cake ... 160g butter ... 4 eggs ... 200g cake flour ... 150g sugar ... a pinch of salt ... zest of one lemon ... 1 tsp baking powder ... 1/2 tsp of vanilla essence ... red and yellow sprinkles (so that the inside of the cake will also be red and yellow) 10. Preheat oven to 160°C and grease cake pan with oil or butter 11. Using an electric mixer, mix eggs and sugar until creamy and fluffy 12. Add in vanilla essence and lemon zest 13. Sift in flour and salt and use a spatula to stir the batter until well incorporated 14. Mix red and yellow sprinkles into the batter and pour the batter into the cake pan. 15. Bake for around 1 hour, insert a long toothpick into the middle of cake and it is ready when the toothpick comes out clean 16. Remove the cake from the pan and let it cool down completely 17. Print out two copies of the template and cut out the shape of Iron Man's face; cut the cake along the template buttercream ... 150g butter ... 80g icing sugar ... 1 tsp of vanilla essence 18. Using an electric mixer, whip butter, icing sugar and vanilla essence until pale in colour and fluffy in texture 19. Cut the pound cake half into two thinner layers, then use a butter knife to butter on the buttercream in between the two layers as well as the surface of the whole cake 20. Take out the fondants from the fridge, sprinkle some icing sugar on the bench top and roll out the red fondant (2mm thick) 21. Cover the cake with the red fondant and smooth out the surface of the cake with your hands, cut out the excess fondant from the sides 22. With the second template page, cut out the black parts that comprise the face of Iron Man. Roll out the yellow fondant and use a sharp knife to cut out the yellow pieces, then cut out the eyes with the white fondant 23. Assemble the face of Iron Man, use a bit of alcohol as a glue to help sticking on the pieces if needed 24. Use the leftover red fondant to make two flat circles as Iron Man's ears 25. (Optional) Brush on golden paint on the yellow surface of the cake to create a metallic finish So this is how it looked after taking the plane to Hong Kong, the edges had become rounder With candles
