Creator: Condumbisblack is an unusual house, but still an impressive success. Instead of having large enclosed areas like most bases, this project tries to keep the subject open with many large platforms that players can do whatever they need. A project built on water is a common idea for several reasons. For added beauty, this base is built on a coral reef, which means the underlying water is beautiful and colorful. The recently released Caves & Cliffs update has completely overhauled land generation, offering fantastic building options. Although manufacturers still use tools to manipulate the soil with their work, finding the perfect spot to create a fortress island is now much easier. This project takes a rather large island and transforms the whole thing into a gigantic castle with a small city wall inside. However, there is much more than meets the eye as the bottom of the castle has been dug up, allowing the water to flow and reveal more secrets. However, the pillars are only part of the effect, as the middle sliding elements create a wonderful living space or farm according to the consumer's requirements. It also has a somewhat magical atmosphere, as the chains attached to the pillars hold them in place, almost as if they were planted by an ancient evil. This base is perhaps the most surprising. It was created not only in survival mode, but unfortunately also on the famous 2B2T server. 2B2T is the largest anarchic Minecraft server, so there are no rules or controls here. The base will be upset when they're spotted, so it's unbelievable to hide something this big for so long. The base itself is a beautiful thing to match the end it was built in, the aesthetic and detailed interior that allows multiple items to be stored and multiple players to live in. As with 2B2T, the base was discovered and destroyed in 2019, but its incredible beauty has been archived so the whole world can turn its back on it.
